PARAGRAPHS.

Although the Vatican has looked coldly upon recent proposal to add the name of Queen Marie Antoinette to the calendar of saints, she had full share of what may be called aesthetic canonization. The latest artistic memorial of this unfortunate woman is the production of Lord Ronald Gower, who has just completed a bust representing her as, with hands tied behind her, she is proceeding to the place of execution. The work is altogether very refined and admirable.

The late Kukwar of Baroda was supposed to have had the most magnificent coat ever made in India, valued at six lakhs of rupees, or $275,000, which he sent as an offering to the shrine of the Prophet at Mecca. But this coat is about to be eclipsed by one lately made for the Maharajah of Puttala, which a correspondent of the Delhi Gazette tells us, is valued at fifteen lakhs ($675,000), set with precious stones, and fringed about the collar, cuffs, and front with large pearls. The coat will be worn at the durbar of the Prince of Wales.

The latest dodge in London, where the water supply is not yet permanent, as in New York, is the following: A scamp enters a dwelling house toward noon, and seizes the females by announcing that the man has burst, and that he is sent by the water company to see that all water is immediately drawn from the cisterns. Every available tub, pail, and utensil is immediately requisitioned, for the fellow tells them that they will not have a drop of water for the next forty-eight hours. While the servants are busy fulfilling his orders he pockets every valuable within his reach, and finally vanishes, after ordering all fires in the house to be put out.
